

Forgetting too much, too often?

You may be exhibiting a sign of Alzheimer's.

Or it could just be some age-related changes. But if you are starting to show signs of dementia, testing now can help your physician evaluate your symptoms.

If Alzheimer's is not the cause, treatments may be available to help slow or even reverse symptoms.

While there is currently no noninvasive test to evaluate Alzheimer's, exciting new advances in brain imaging technology using the Siemens' Biograph mCT family of PET•CT scanners may help visualize signs of the disease.

If Alzheimer's is suspected, intervention may be available to help treat symptoms.

Ask your physician about noninvasive brain imaging with Biograph mCT today.